NAUMBURG

Family tree!

The Naumburgs are descended from a long line of cantors and writers, some of whom achieved distinction in the field of Jewish Music, books and commentaries, and some simply fulfilled the office of cantor, passing it from father to son.

The earliest Naumburg of which there is mention was Abraham Naumburg who was Chasan in Prag in 1612.

There followed many generations of Naumburgs who were active in synagogue music and writings as follows:

Baruch, father of Wolf who was a cantor in Grosslogou, Germany. He wrote "Samor losefer Thora" which was published in Dyrenforth in 1692. His son was Elkana who was cantor at Fuerth. He also did fine art embroidery for Thora curtains which were valued highly and used in Fuerth and synagogues in other cities. He was living in 1714. He had three sons: Samuel, Baruch and Hirsch.

Samuel was a cantor in Kassel, Germany. He died in Kassel in 1754 and left a wife Michle and a son Wolf.

Baruch was a cantor in Witteldhofen. He wrote "Sidur birurim", comments to Balhaturim in Fuerth in 1752. in 1750 he wrote a pamphlet "Mekor Baruch Koton".

Hirsch was the youngest brother and have no record of him.

Baruch had two sons, Jacob and Elkana.

Jacob published in Fuerth "Nachlath Jacob", a commentary to several small Talmud treatises. In 1773 he received the title "Chover" from Rabbi Table Scheuer of Mainz. He wrote novels to the Pentateuch and the Talmud which were finished in Offenbach in 1781. He was also a teacher in the Isaac Speier School in Offenbach. He died the 6th of Schwat(Jan.30/31-1811) Elkana, the second son, was born in 1746. He was the cantor in Treutchlingen, Bavaria, and acted as Mohel in the neighboring communities. His wife was Rechle, who was born in 1759 and died Feb. 15, 1829.

Baruch, who was the older son of Elkana, went to Donnerloke in 1809 when he married Esther. His son was Samuel Naumburg (Naumbourg) who became the chief cantor of the Temple Consistorial Israelite in Paris, France. He was born in 1817, and died May 1, 1880. There is attached hereto a sketch of his accomplishments and compositions, also a copy of the betrothal contract between his parents.

Wolf, the younger son of Elkana, followed his father as cantor in Treutchlingen. From this Wolf the line of Naumburgs follows, leading to the many who emigrated to America. From here on their names and dates appear on the following pages.

NAUBOURG, SAMUEL

French composer; born at Dennelohe, Bavaria Mar. 15, 1817; died at Saint Mande near Paris May 1, 1880. After having held the office of Chazan and reader at Besancon and directed the choir of the synagogue at Strasburg, he was called in 1845 to officiate in the synagogue of the Rue Notre Dame de Nazareth at Paris, where he became professor of liturgized music at the Seminaire Israelite. Shortly before his death he was elected officier d'Academie. The more important of his compositions are: "Chants Liturgicals des Grandes Fetes"(Paris 1847); " Zemirot Yisrael", comprising psalms, hymns and the complete liturgy from the most remote times to the present day; "Shire Kodesh", a new collection of religious songs for use in Jewish worship (1864); "Auguddat Shirim", a collection of religious and popular Hebrew songs from the most ancient times to the present day (1874); "Shir ha Shirim Asher li Shelomoh" (1877) with an essay on the life and works of Solomon de Rossi. The last mentioned work is dedicated to Baron Edmond de Rothschild who discovered a portion of the songs of DeRossi and who encouraged Naubourg in his efforts to revive the musical productions of the old master.

was born 1815 near MUnich as son,grandson and great-grandson of a famous southwest German cantor's family,which originated in Fuerth in the 16th century. He was related to the French com oser Halevy,the author of the opera "The Jewess",who likewise came from Fuerth. After having studied music and rabbinics in Munich and Strasbourg,he went to Paris as cantor and after a very successful start,became in 1843 the chief cantor of the Temple Consistorial Israelite in Paris. He died there in 1881.

He published five large volumes of synagogue music,based upon the old traditional elements,yet at the same time influenced by the French "Great Opera of his time; actually,the five volumes contain synagocal contributions by Halevy and Meyerberg who were good friends of N.

Besides the five volumes which provide music for the entire ecclesiastical year, he wrote a fine scolarly essey on the sources of the traditional music of Judaism (Recueil) and was one of the first Jewish scholars to call general attention to the analogies between the gregorian Chant and the Chant of the Synagogue. He also edited the first modern publication of the works of the famous Salomone Rossi il Hergo (1556-1628) together with Vincent D'Indy,under the patronage of Baron Rothschild.

The two pieces by Naumburg presented here are (1) Vaani Tefilloai,part of the larger hymn"How beautiful are Thy tents,o Jacob. Translation of the sung passage:"May my prayer be offered in an acceptable time;mayest thou,in the greatness of Thy mercy answer me according to Thy faithfulness." (2)B'rosh Heshono is a part of the great poem Unesane Tokef for the day of atonement and the New Year. It was written in the 12th century in the Rhineland. The idea of the poem is a vision of the Day of Judgment. The passage sung here says:"On New Year's day it is written and on the Day of Atonement it is sealed,how many shall leave this world and how many shall enter it,who shall live and who shall die,who has reached the end of his destiny and who has not reached it,who shall be at rest and who shall be restless,who shall be humbled and who shall be exalted."

The resemblance of this poem to the famous sequence of the Roman Church "Dies Irae,Dies Illa" is obvious. Probably the latter was developed from a Syro-Judaean penitential prayer which found the way into the Byzantien liturgy.

The melody of the Jewish piece which Naumbourg left all but untouched dated back to the 14th century.

The Royal District Court Eichstadt decides in the case of WOLF NAUMBURG from Treutchlingen concerning evasion of military duty.

Wolf Naumburg, Clerk from Treutchlingen, is acquitted of the indictment of the crime of evasion of military duty. The expenses of the law suit are borne by the Army. Considering that Wolf Naumburg, born October 5, 1853, entered the age of military duty in the year 1873 and therefore accused of draft evasion cannot be prosecuted because, according to the files of the country court of Weissenburg, he had immigrated to North America already in the year 1868 and had acquired citizenship according to the notarized letter of the Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas for City and County of New York, dated February, 1874.
